ON THE COVER

Painted by Gustav Bauerenfeind (1848-1904), this view of the Western Wall of the Temple Mount dates from 1904. Bauerenfeind was a German Orientalist with Jewish ancestry who was enchanted with the views he recorded in then Palestine. He settled in Jerusalem in 1898 for the remainder of a short life. His work is marked by a commitment to photographic realism and, after a period of neglect, it has regained critical respect. Here it serves as a reminder of the Ninth of Av, the holy day which commemorates the destruction of the temples.

It will be observed this year on July 17-18.

THE JULY CALENDAR OF EVENTS

SHABBAT TOGETHER/YAHRTZEIT SERVICE

A weekly gathering to observe Yahrtzeits, recite Mourner's Kaddish, and mark the end of the week and beginning of Shabbat. Please note the new starting time for this weekly ritual at 5:30 p.m. Services this month take place on July 2, 9, 16, 23, and 30. Zoom Meeting ID: 918-583-7121.

PANIM EL PANIM | SATURDAY MORNING I

Our tradition speaks of an extraordinary power that exists when a group of people gathers together for prayer. "Panim el Panim" is a live broadcast service led by Rabbis Kaiman and Fitzerman. Rooted in our in-person Shabbat morning service, we spend time singing, reflecting, studying Torah, and connecting. Services begin at 9:30 a.m. The dates for Panim el Panim services are July 3, 17 and 31. Zoom Meeting ID: 918-583-7121.

BE-YACHAD | SATURDAY MORNING II

We're excited to begin experimenting with in-person Shabbat experiences. A hybrid experience, this service will also be fully accessible via Zoom, allowing for participation from all parts of our community. Services begin at 9:30 a.m., and advanced reservations are required. Please visit tulsagogue. com to make your reservations. The dates for Be-yachad services are July 10 and 24. Zoom Meeting ID: 918-583-7121.

BAKER'S DOZEN | TUESDAY & THURSDAY

Cookies, cookies and more cookies! We're still at it, collecting cookies, bars, and other single-serving baked goods every Tuesday and Thursday morning. At this point, we continue to honor institutions that offer frontline service during the pandemic, but we are beginning to concentrate on those who need the love that food can represent. Those who are ill, bereaved, or hurting in some way truly appreciate these gifts. All you have to do is pull up to the door on either Tuesday or Thursday morning and place your goods on the table provided.

BLATT+BLUE: SHTISEL III

Our ongoing film and television series, Blatt+Blue, spotlights the discussion-leading skills of film and television enthusiasts David Blatt and Alice Blue. This month they'll discuss Season III of Shtisel, a series that deals with the inner workings of the charedi community in Israel. See page 8 for details. Join the discussion on Zoom: 918-583-7121 at 7:00 p.m.

INTRO

This class is intended for the entire Jewish community as a deep dive into the evolving culture of the Jewish people. You may join at several points during the year as a strategy of next-level education or to prepare to join the Jewish community under the guidance of Rabbi Dan Kaiman. No prior knowledge is required and all materials are studied in English. This course is affiliated with the Miller Introduction to Judaism Course at the American Jewish University and sees its audience as progressive Jews and candidates for conversion across the country. Class begins at 7:30 p.m.

SONGS OF ANGER AND RECRIMINATION

The Synagogue will observe Tisha B'Av, the fast of the Ninth of Av, with a public reading of narratives drawn from the literature of the Holocaust. Edited by Rabbi Marc Fitzerman, the first-hand accounts force us to consider the terrible inhumanity of Nazi brutality, and the extremes of suffering and deprivation. This will be a digital experience in the Synagogue Zoom Room at 918 583 7121. No reservation is necessary. All digital experiences are carefully monitored to protect against unwanted disruption. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m.

"A LETTER OF LOVE AND LONGING FOR HUMAN BEINGS WHEREVER THEY ARE..."

ORI ALON-CO-CREATOR OF SHTISEL

FROM RABBI FITZERMAN

NINETEEN TWENTY-ONE

By the time this reaches you, it will already be July, which means that many of the events on the Tulsa Race Massacre Anniversary calendar will have passed. Rabbi Kaiman and I participated as robustly as we could. I'm touched that I was asked to stand with the community of Vernon AME, the only church building that survived the Massacre, and which has testified since to African-American strength and resilience. The church now has a Prayer Wall on the south side of the building which I hope will be another gathering place for Tulsa. We need many more of those spaces in this city, where Black and White people can come together in accord.

Some of you may have been dismayed by the style of the commemoration. Many people, including those who organized the events, would say that there were some rough edges in the public space. I would have given a lot to see one of my heroes, Stacey Abrams, who has shown us how grass roots organizing really works. You throw yourself into the fray in the smartest possible way and hope, at least at the outset, for what she calls "good losses." That means that you don't lose by much, and eventually you win. But Ms. Abrams' appearance was cancelled in a kerfuffle. That's the way kerfuffles go.

But it is also the way commemoration goes. They are inevitably messy and contentious events. People square off and work to tell important stories as if they belong exclusively to competing camps. I saw this most evidently all over Poland in three-panel plaques telling the story of the Sho'ah. The Hebrew version differed from the Yiddish version and both differed from the English. On rare occasions, I could decipher some of the Polish, at least when it came to key words like "Jew" or "Pole." We should always expect that there will be differences in attitude and substantial differences in the way stories are told.

The important thing about the 1921 Tulsa Race Massacre is that the episode is now being researched in powerful and very public ways. A buried episode in our history is getting substantial attention, including the unearthing of incontrovertible forensic evidence. As other sites are probed, there will undoubtedly be more. All of this will be heartbreaking, but ultimately productive. We will not be able to right the wrongs of our national history until a fuller version of the truth emerges. If the process is messy, that is the price we pay. Better that than blindness and Ben Bag Bag used to say "Turn it, and turn it, for everything is in it." It's a classic line from Pirkei Avot and most commentators explain that "it" refers to the Torah. Learning Torah is a lifelong endeavor, to be examined over and over again, discovering new meanings and nuances with every seasonal turn and with each life transition.

With Torah at the center we animate our lives with traditions and rituals, holidays and habits that connect us to those who came before us, along with those with whom we share community today. And so, of course, Ben Bag Bag reminds us that we have to keep turning to Torah as a resource for discovery as we navigate the world.

But there's another way to understand the "it" to which Ben Bag Bag refers. "It" may be Judaism itself, and so what this sage is reminding us is that Judaism is an evolving tradition. Religion often gets caught in the traps of tradition and the folkways of the generations who came before us. "Why do we do X? Because we've always done X." Of course, this impetus to resist change is important. In a way, it is exactly what the Torah seeks to preserve. But we need to be reminded that ours is an evolving tradition, because over and over again we confront new realities. What makes for healthy community is the ability to preserve tradition while adapting to what comes next. The only way to do that is through constant revisiting and reacquainting. We assess what works, open ourselves to experimentation, and we listen carefully to the world around us. That's one good formula for relevant and meaningful religious community.

Whether you see "it" as Torah or Judaism itself, Ben Bag Bag is reminding us of the importance of study as means to discover and connect to Judaism. One way into a practice of study is our ongoing INTRO course. Through this series of classes, we think about Judaism with a critical and thoughtful eye. It's not just something we practice or come to the Synagogue to "do," but a set of ideas worthy of exploration and critical thought. Whether you've practiced Judaism your whole life, or you are new to a relationship with our community, I believe it is always worthwhile to dive into a learning experience. If INTRO appeals to you, I'll look forward to learning together. No matter what, I know that together we'll keep turning it and turning it. And somehow, we'll find everything we need.

PUBLIC HEALTH

MASKS

Like all of you, we are reading extensively, speaking with physicians and public health officials, and trying to get a bead on what is likely to happen next in the ongoing pandemic. At this point, there is a consensus that the so-called Delta variant is likely to be more contagious than its predecessors and that unvaccinated people are at heightened risk. So far, however, the initial vaccines are proving to be highly effective barriers to contagion.

That leaves the question of those who cannot be vaccinated and children under twelve, for whom vaccines are still being tested. At this point we have opened a direct line of communication with the Tulsa Health Department. Dr. Bruce Dart recently fielded a question about mask-wearing for those who have been vaccinated, and approved this response:

Q. If I have already been vaccinated, why should I wear a mask inside the Synagogue?

A. There is very little evidence that a vaccinated person would be in personal danger without a mask. But there are still immuno-compromised people and those with underlying conditions who are at risk. In addition, there are many children under twelve who cannot yet be vaccinated. Even if they don't get sick (or at least very sick), people with vaccinations can get COVID and there is a possibility that they can transmit it. That includes the worrisome variant known as the Delta version. For that reason, we earnestly ask you to wear a mask in the building. Even though we do not formally require it, it still helps protect young people and those with significant underlying conditions. We are committed to our entire community and we ask your support.

Condolences to the families of Surfside, Florida.

May the memory of the righteous be for a blessing.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

A MESSAGE FROM DR. JOHN SCHUMANN

I'm honored to serve as president of our congregation's Board of Directors. As it appears that the Covid-19 pandemic is on the wane, I'm optimistic that in the coming year we will be able to resume many of the familiar rhythms of congregational life.

Several people have asked about a career transition I've decided to undertake. I am stepping down from my role at the University of Oklahoma's Tulsa campus. After more than two decades in academia, I feel the time is right for me to leave the ivory tower.

My decision is partly about the pandemic—I wanted to be more directly engaged in patient care. It's also about a stage of life—our youngest child just graduated from high school and will head away to college later this summer. As empty nesters, Sarah-Anne and I have both decided to take on new challenges.

I will be helping to bring Oak Street Health to Oklahoma. We will soon open health centers in Tulsa and Oklahoma City. Oak Street is a provider of value-based primary care for Medicare patients. This means the company assumes risk for the total health of patients under our care. In its first eight years, Oak Street has been able to realize significant savings and lessen morbidity by heavily investing in primary care and prevention.

As I undertake this new role in my professional life, I feel blessed to simultaneously step into the role of congregation president. Please don't hesitate to reach out with ideas, thoughts, or questions.

PRACTICAL MATTERS

DUES STATEMENTS

As statements begin to reach you in the course of the summer, please remember that there were no automatic increases for the current year (ending March 2022). If you would like to increase your dues, please call Cheryl in the Synagogue Office, but you are not obligated for an increase. You may also recall that we are no longer billing for dues to be sent to our national synagogue organization. The previous amounts have been folded into your statement in order to offset increased security costs, but if you would like that sum stricken from your statement, just let us know and we will process your request. For those who can help with a security assessment, we are deeply grateful.

BAT MITZVAH

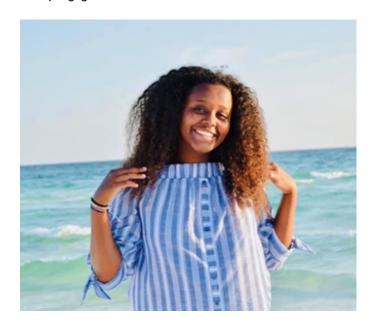

BAT MITZVAH OF PACEY BRODY

Pacey Brody, daughter of Jocelyn Brody, sister of Shelato, will celebrate her bat mitzvah during a Havdalah service on Saturday, July 31, 2021, at Congregation B'nai Emunah. Pacey chanted her original Haftorah and Maftir on Zoom services in May of 2020 and May of 2021. We are so proud of how she has handled all of the changes in this past year of unknowns. Preparations have been led by Elliott Wulff under the direction of Sara Levitt. We are so thankful for them. They have encouraged Pacey so much through such a difficult time.

Pacey will be in the 8th grade this coming year at Jenks Middle School. She spends her time away from school taking singing lessons and performing. Pacey enjoys the lake during the summer and is also taking golf lessons. She truly loves to spend time with her family and friends.

Born in Ethiopia, Pacey decided to give back to her birth country through her Mitzvah Project. She is raising money for science equipment for rural schools in Ethiopia. To learn more and to donate, please visit https://bit.ly/PBrodyMitzvah.

The community is invited to join the celebration on Zoom in the Synagogue Zoom Room.

COMING TOGETHER

In a little over a month, the school community will come together for the first time since the start of the pandemic in our Synagogue. I know that our students, families, and teachers will show up on our first day of school next month as different people than when they were last in the building.

The year in between brought great uncertainty, isolation for many, fear, and even trauma. In the throes of curriculum and snack time planning, book buying, and preparing for our social justice initiatives, I keep wondering about our role as educators to care for the social and emotional wellbeing of our students and families. As much as it's our responsibility to teach the nature of Jewish peoplehood, it is our responsibility to care for and support our student's overall wellness.

What does this look like in real-time? It is an approach and a process. This year, we will work with our staff to create routines and spaces that invite students to share the emotions they are bringing with them to the classroom and offer support where necessary. This work will also be threaded into our learning, using prayer as an opportunity for reflection, the stories of our ancestors as models for social-emotional intelligence, and classroom routines to encourage self-awareness as part of preparing and transitioning to learning.

This work, perhaps, is one of the most important things we can teach our children; that their Jewish community loves and supports them, now and always.

Registration for our school programs will open in the first week of July for Pre-School (2 years) through seventh grade students. Families should keep their eyes out for emails from Morah Sara or be in touch at slevitt@bnaiemunah.com.

SPECIAL EVENTS

BLATT+BLUE DO SHTISEL ON JULY 8

The Synagogue's ongoing program on Jewish cinema and television will focus in July on Shtisel: Season Three. The best way to bring yourself up to speed is to binge watch the Netflix series beginning now. But if you don't have time, use your web browser to read a summary of the first two seasons and then plunge in. Like all of the great long-form series in this golden age of novelistic television, each season is a stand-alone unit and has its own theme, tone, and dynamic.

Shtisel is unusual for its calm, sympathetic look at charedi Jewish life in Israel, but it is part of a new genre in which the concerns and preoccupations of the ultra-orthodox are center stage. Created by Ori Alon and Yehonatan Indursky, the series focuses on the artist, Akiva Shtisel, a religious man-boy who cannot find his place in a society which values rigor and clarity. The great achievement of the show is that it shows us that vigor and clarity may be the outward look of the community, but there is a great deal of nuance within.

Blatt + Blue spotlights film and television enthusiasts David Blatt and Alice Blue, who begin each session with a summary of the featured material. It means that you'll be able to follow the conversation even if you have to delay your viewing of the film itself. After that, it's questions and comments from the Zoom Room audience.

Season Three of Shtisel is easily available on Netflix, with nine episodes in the release. This season pays close attention to the character played by Shira Haas, the justly admired actor who has appeared in several projects featuring Orthodox protagonists.

Join the Zoom discussion on Thursday evening, July 8, at 7:00 p.m. The Zoom meeting ID is 918-583-7121 and the session will conclude at 8:00 p.m.
